Summarising

Otter is not a main character, but is often an important source of information with a surprising amount to say.

He has a rather long speech in chapter four, starting with 'Thought I should...' What is he actually trying to communicate here? What is the important information? Also, which details are unnecessary?

Your challenge is to summarise Otter's speech. You need to reduce it to no more than 325 words. Make notes on what to include, what are the important parts of the story that you thought of before?
